Learning and Innovation in Resilient Systems

1 Objectives and Research Area

The research program “Learning and Innovation in Resilient Systems” was approved by the Dean of the Faculty of Management, Science and Technology (MST) in December 2015 and it integrates the research carried out in the seven departments of MST, across three scientific disciplines: Management Science, Natural Sciences and Computer Sciences. Given the heterogeneity of the scientific disciplines represented in MST, the research program has an interdisciplinary character and the main goals of the research program are: (1) to present research within the faculty in a coherent way, (2) to build bridges between departments and encourage multidisciplinary research, (3) to guide future research directions within the faculty, and (4) to enable participation in research assessments in the future.

Research Area & Research Lines

The focus of the research program is on resilient systems with the general aim of increasing our understanding of the innovative and learning capacity of resilient systems, with a focus on (i) information and computer systems, (ii) organizational and management systems, and (iii) environmental systems. The interdisciplinary research within MST is organized in three research lines (Resilience, Learning and Innovation) that bridge the three main scientific domains (Management Science, Natural Sciences and Computer Sciences) represented in the school. A survey carried out within MST in 2014 shows a rather balanced distribution of researchers within the three research lines: resilience (48), learning (45) and innovation (38). There are various indicators that reflect the multidisciplinary character of the MST research program. The first one, refers to the fact that many individual researchers carry out multidisciplinary research and they are active in more than one research line. Research papers like Becker, Huitema & Aerts (2015), Jordan, Huitema et al (2015), Caniëls & Rietzschel (2015), Tabuenca, Kalz, Drachsler & Specht (2015), Van der Heijden, Gorgievski & De Lange (2015), Hagmann, Semeijn & Vellenga (2015), Ooms, Bell & Kok (2015) illustrate the multidisciplinary research interest of the MST researchers. Second, some of the MST researchers are members in the editorial boards of international journals with a clear multidisciplinary focus (Dave Huitema is associate editor of Ecology and Society, Raoul Beunen is on the editorial board of Journal of Environmental Planning and Management, Majolein Caniëls is member on the editorial board of Creativity and Innovation Management). The third one refers to the research symposia organized monthly within MST. All MST researchers are invited to attend these meetings that create a platform for interdisciplinary dialogue and aim at stimulating multidisciplinary research.

1.1 Strategy

The strategic aims for 2015 were:

- (1) to increase the national and international visibility of the research program by publishing the research results in established scientific journals
- (2) to strengthen the existing collaborations with external partners and build new collaborations along the lines of the research program, and
- (3) to contribute to the international research agenda and attempt to attract research funds from various funding agencies

One of the main challenges for the research strategy development and implementation refers to the heavy teaching load generated by increasing student numbers. In terms of steering mechanisms, during 2015 input, process and output steering mechanisms were used to cope with this and other challenges. In terms of inputs, MST continued to invest strategic funds in research and focused on attracting scholars with a good research track record and also invested in hiring three post-doctoral researchers to support the research integration across departments. Although the heavy teaching load is a generic problem among the MST department, it is attempted to preserve a 30% research time for the MST researchers. In terms of process, various research meetings are organized within MST. Some of these research meetings are organized at the department level, while at the school level an MST seminar is organized monthly. These research meetings aim at increasing collaboration within as well as between departments, as research collaboration is expected to improve both the individual and group level research performance. Given the teaching tradition in Open Universiteit in general and MST in particular, an important challenge was to stimulate all academic personnel (Assistant Professors, Associate Professors and Full Professors) to acquire a PhD. During the last years, teaching personnel was facilitated in terms of time allocation and supervision to engage in a PhD trajectory and in 2015, 89% of the academic personnel within MST had a PhD. Finally, in terms of output steering, researchers are stimulated to publish in leading international journals with a clear focus on ISI listed outlets. Moreover, MST supports the researchers to attend international conferences and play an active (leading) role in organizing workshops and symposia during major international research events. This will ultimately enlarge the national and international collaboration network of the MST researchers.

1.2 Research environment and embedding

MST has its own graduate school, the “PhD school” headed by Prof. Harold Krikke that currently has a number of 70 PhD students. The MST researchers are also embedded in the Doctorate School at the university level and during 2015, 13 PhD students have successfully defended their PhD theses in MST. Next to the internal supervision, MST researchers were invited to take part in several PhD committees across The Netherlands and abroad. During 2015, MST researchers worked in research partnerships with 95 research organizations or associations worldwide. Among these partnerships, MST researchers were involved in: (1) research collaborations that yielded a substantial number of publications, (2) active participation in professional associations reflected by the organization of various workshops at international conferences and (3) contract research for external partners. These collaborations have the potential of improving the international visibility of the MST research and generate a sustainable network of partners that will further support the development of research climate within MTS.

2 Content of research program

Systemic resilience is the core theme underlying the MST research program. Whilst resilience has often been associated with continued performance and stability of certain systems under stress (a conservative element), it can and will here be interpreted in a way that emphasizes the need for adaptation and even transformation (a proactive and change focused aspect). In this vein we argue that resilient systems are those that combine exploration and exploitation capacities. Exploration is needed to spot new developments, analyze and assess them so that the system can be amended if the need arises. Exploitation is about fine tuning the functionality of the system under the current conditions, so that effectiveness and efficiency gains are made. Both learning and innovation are deemed necessary for systems to become and remain resilient. In the MST program we take a relational perspective on learning as a core process that secures adaptation and change. Therefore, learning is what makes systems ready for innovating, but innovation is also about organizational and political processes, and the agency embedded therein. Novel ideas and concepts do not develop, diffuse and impact the world just by themselves: they need to be stimulated. Particularly in the relation between innovation and learning MST can build upon the existing frontrunner position of the OU in the field of understanding and facilitating learning processes. MST can contribute to this through combined expertise from Management Science, Natural Sciences and Computer Sciences. An overview of the three research lines within MST is presented below.

The Resilience research line is coordinated by Harald Vranken and the main aim of this research line is to increase our understanding of the capacity of systems to absorb disturbance and reorganize while undergoing change so as to still retain essentially the same function. Research topics that are representative of this research line are: green IT; security of on-line banking and smart grids; sustainable HRM; sustainable business models for OER; social entrepreneurship; supply chain management and environmental modelling and risk assessment.

The Learning research line is coordinated by Marjolein Caniëls and its main aim is to improve our understanding of learning by individuals, groups and organizations. Research topics that are addressed in this research line are: automated feedback and virtual labs; didactics for teaching in computer science; social learning by stakeholders; learning by groups and organizations and learning in interactive networks.

The Innovation research line is coordinated by Dave Huitema and the main aim of this research line is to enhance our knowledge of how innovations emerge, diffuse and impact the world, and the role of agency therein. Relevant research topics are: the role of policy entrepreneurs in environmental governance; business intelligence and smart services; the role of scientists in the diffusion of Novel environmental policy concepts; financial accounting innovations; the impact of new IT technologies on business process management and innovative business models.

MST research in these three lines is funded mainly through direct funding, yet part of the research is also funded through research grants and contract research. A short overview of these three funding lines is presented below and the exact funding amounts are presented in Table 2.2.

Direct funding (1) Most of the research is financed through direct funding and an important addition to the research budget is the “Stimuleringsfonds Onderzoek” granted by the Executive Board (College van Bestuur) to the MST school. During 2015, three post-docs were financed from this research fund as well as one Chair in Organizational Behavior.
Research grants (2) The only research grant that was obtained during 2015 from NWO was “The Practice of sustainable business models: the case of circular supply management”, grant obtained by Marjolein Caniëls in collaboration with Tilburg University. One PhD student is financed through this grant.
Contract research (3) During 2015 MST researchers were involved in various contract research projects. Marko van Eekelen was involved in projects with the Politieacademie, Nederlandse Vereniging van Banken and EU, Ansje Löhr was involved in projects with Provincie Limburg and the United Nations, Tinka van Vuuren was involved in a project with Provincie Limburg, while Judith Semeijn realized a project with VSNU. A complete list of the contract research carried out by MST researchers during 2015 is presented in Appendix 3.

3 Calls and proposals

3.1 For which calls proposals are submitted in the reporting year?

During 2015, MST researchers have applied for research grants to the EU funding agencies and also to NWO.

3.2 What was the selection strategy for calls? Which type of calls had the focus?

During 2015, MST researchers focused on applying for research grants and also on acquiring contract research. The target funding agencies in the future are NWO as well as European funding agencies. An overview of the grant applications made by MST researchers during 2015 is presented in Appendix 3.

4 Resources and facilities

Currently 103 academic personnel with research time are affiliated with the MST school. The research investment strategy followed by MST increased the average percentage of research time per FTE from .32 in 2014 to .36 in 2015. To date, most of the research time is financed directly by MST and it is the ambition that in the coming years, the contribution of research grants and contract research to research funding should increase. In an effort to further stimulate research within MST, during 2015 eight Chairs with a research component were filled. The newly appointed professors are: Prof. M. Kalz (Open Educational Resources), Prof. W.F.M. Bams (Financial Management and Financial Markets), Prof. W. F. J. Buijink (Accounting), Prof. J. H. Semeijn (Strategic Human Resources Management), Prof. Jos J.M. Trienekens (Information Management in Educational Value Networks), Prof. Stefanie Kleimeier (Entrepreneurial Finance and Banking), Prof. Dave Huitema (Milieubeleid) and Prof. P.L. Curseu (Organizational Behavior). A more detailed description of the specific Chairs for each of professors appointed in 2015 is presented in Appendix 2. The role of the newly appointed professors is to further develop the MST research program and to increase its visibility at the national and international level.

5 Research Quality

Research quality is a central element of the MST research program. MST researchers are encouraged to publish in ISI listed journals, and the number of ISI listed publications increased from 56 in 2014 to 78 in 2015 (an overview of the research output per different categories is presented in section 5.1 and the complete list of publications is presented in Appendix 1). This substantial increase in the ISI listed publications reflects the general preoccupation for publishing MST research in high quality peer-reviewed outlets (we report below five key publications for 2015, all published in journals listed in the first quartile of their respective category in ISI Web of Science). Other important indicators of research quality are:

- (1) the awards received by the MST researchers during 2015 (for example best paper awards from Creativity and Innovation Management and European Journal of Work and Organizational Psychology as well as best paper awards at international conferences),
- (2) the keynote addresses at international conferences and research meetings and
- (3) the active presence in editorial boards of well-respected international journals.

A comprehensive list of these marks of recognition is presented in section 5.2.

*Reporting Open Access published peer-reviewed articles is an addition to the format based on VSNU agreement with the Ministry of Education, Culture and Science.

A peer-reviewed Open Access published article is gratis and permanently available on the website of the publisher or in a trusted repository. Preprints that are often archived in repositories are excluded.

Three categories of Open Access are distinguished:

Category A: Gold OA based on the list of Open Access Journals (DOAJ: <https://doaj.org/>)

Category B: Gold not DOAJ classified/ Hybrid (ACP deals with Springer and other publishers)

Category C: Green OA only. The Article is OA only and is available via a trusted repository

Articles that are intended to be OA but are published under embargo on the reference data (31-12-2015), are considered non-OA until the moment the embargo is lifted. Such articles can be included in the report of 2016

6 Relevance to society

Through the very nature of its educational programs, MST is deeply committed to attend to the educational needs of professionals and as such to serve a large variety of social groups. The MST research program builds on this commitment to society and aims at bridging the gap between the academic world and practice.

A clear example of this commitment is the Business Intelligence & Smart Services Institute (BISS) built as a multidisciplinary cooperation between Open University of the Netherlands, Maastricht University, and Zuyd University of Applied Science and aimed at fostering regional economic growth. MST plays an important part in BISS with the main aim to facilitate a close interaction of academics with regional business and other organizations in order to foster the transfer of academic knowledge into the community, to improve services and develop new ideas for organizational development and growth.

Another way in which MST research contributes to society is through the PhD program. Most of the PhD students that graduated in 2015 are external PhD students, meaning that they often work on their PhD research next to having another job in another organization. The topics addressed in the PhD theses are therefore directly related to real issues organizations (or society in general) are confronted with and create a direct academic knowledge transfer to society. A particularly important initiative for research valorization is the Ghana PhD program, within the PhD School. In this program 7 PhD students from Ghana work on their PhD research under the supervision of MST researchers. Most of the PhD theses address issues highly relevant for the general social and economic context in Ghana and as such, ensure a direct knowledge transfer from the academic world to society.

Scientific research is transferred to society through communications via various media channels. During 2015 the MST researchers were actively involved in popularizing and communicating to the large public some of the research carried out in the three research lines, as illustrated by the 68 professional publications, 42 publications in general media and 19 contributions via internet, tv or radio.

6.2 Demonstrable use of products - Use of research products by societal groups

Appendix 3 presents an overview of the contract research carried out during 2015 in MST. Through contract research, academic knowledge and expertise is used to tackle very specific organizational and societal issues. Partners that have benefited from this way of transferring academic knowledge are: Politieacademie, Nederlandse Vereniging van Banken, European Union, Provincie Limburg, the United Nations and VSNU. Finally, various reports were written for VGZ and for VOORT Innovatiemanagement Utrecht.

6.3 Demonstrable marks of recognition - Marks of recognition by societal groups

Next to the contract research, the societal relevance of the research carried out in MST is also illustrated by the fact that the NOLOC Vereniging voor loopbaanprofessionals financially supports the Chair on Strategic Human Resources Management held by Prof. Judith Semeijn.
