

Abstract Rebecca

Human animal Interaction and lifelong healthy behavior Theoretical and practical models will be presented on ways in which people and companion dogs engage in health-facilitating interaction. In particular, physical activity in response to a global concern with overweight and obesity will be discussed in terms of dog ownership and animal assisted interventions (dog walking programs). Research findings will be presented demonstrating the potential of such interventions.